What is Self-Selection?

Ever noticed your dog chewing on clivers? Or wondered why your horse pulled you towards that clump of cow parsley and ate it ravenously?

If you have, you've witnessed self selection or self-medication.

Animals use their inborn or innate abilities to choose herbs like clivers and cow parsley, both excellent detoxifying spring detox, and both packed with essential nutrients.

Animals may choose to self-medicate on flowers, roots, berries, leaves, barks resins and a range of other botanical goodies including hydrolats and essential oils to rebalance their bodies systems. It may be to rebalance the gut microbiome, improve mobility, reduce allergies or relieve stress and anxiety, or a combination of related issues.

We are often asked questions including;

- What quantity of herbs do I feed?
- Does dose go by weight?
- How much is safe to feed?

To answer these questions, it's important to understand the difference between botanicals and medicines.

Botanicals V's Medicines

Botanicals

Natural herbs and herbal products containing many active ingredients.
Dosages or amount to feed can not be accurately given as the amount of each active ingredient differs from batch to batch. It is simply not feasible for producers or suppliers to test for all active ingredient. Self- selection allows animals to choose the botanicals they need and the amount they require, so no set dose is correct.

Medicines

Synthetically synthesised chemicals often based around the active ingredients of herbs. Medicines have one or two active ingredients to target specific issues, and set dosages are prescribed by vets. Even then your animal may require more or less of a drug for the desired result.

Choosing Botanicals

When choosing which botanicals to offer, first identify the body systems which may need rebalancing. Then we recommend choosing the smallest packs or bottles of several different botanicals to offer in the same session

Simple Rules of Self-Selection

There are a few simple rules which must be followed to ensure true self-selection:

- ✓ Choose a quiet time of the day
- ✓ If you have important training or competitions planned in the next couple of days, consider doing the self-selection session another day.
- ✓ Ensure your animal isn't hungry and always has access to water.
- ✓ Self-selection can happen with friends. Look at the interactions between the animals and make notes on choices and behaviours.
- ✓ Start with nutritional botanicals including spirulina, barleygrass, wheatgrass, hemp and chlorella. These are all powders, so put a teaspoon of each powder into a bowl, plate or saucer, adding a little water to make a paste. This way the powder doesn't go up their noses and put them off.
- ✓ Move onto herbs for physical conditions like improving the gut microbiome including burdock, dandelion and chicory roots or mobility issues including turmeric, meadowsweet, willow, devils claw root.
- ✓ End the session with offering hydrolats or essential oils for emotional support
- ✓ Offer together and record which are readily eaten, licked or selected.
- ✓ At the end of the session, allow your animals time to process mentally and physically.

In this session, spirulina and brewers yeast original were the firm favourites, chosen over hemp, chlorella and brewers yeast gluten free.

Alfalfa Powder

Like many of the rich green herbs Alfalfa contains many essential vitamins and minerals but it is particularly rich in calcium. It is well known that calcium is essential for healthy teeth and bones, and for lactating mothers to produce higher quality milk for their offspring, but calcium is essential for LIFE. Without adequate levels of calcium every cell in the body simply wouldn't function at optimum level, wouldn't be able to communicate its needs at cellular level with its neighbours, and communicate with the rest of the body meaning homeostasis and health would be compromised. Alfalfa can be offered for:

- Improving nutrition
- Improving energy levels
- Improving hoof and coat health
- Improving muscle density and promoting cell repair
- Naturally low in carbohydrates and sugars
- Increasing milk production

Kala namak -Black Salt

Black Salt or kala namak is a mineral rich salt originating from the Himalayan regions of Napal, India and Pakistan. The distinctive flavour is produced by heating Himalayan rock salt with a mixture of local botanicals and charcoal.

Kala namak is rich in natural minerals including potassium chloride, magnesium sulphite, and iron sulphide but is naturally low in sodium chloride unlike table salt.

Potassium chloride

Essential for muscle function, improving digestion and alleviating bloating, reducing cholesterol and improving circulation.

Magnesium sulphate

Essential for increasing magnesium levels in the body promoting calmness of mind and to improve muscle function, prevent cramping and muscle fatigue.

Iron Sulphide

A natural from of easily absorbed iron essential for reducing swelling and water retention, promoting hydration, reducing body fats and preventing anaemia.

Introducing Hydrolats

The word ‘hydrolat’ come from the French ‘milky water’ as some hydrolats when distilled have a milky appearance and are the result of botanical distillations.

Many commercially produced hydrolats are a by-product of the essential oil industry and can easily be contaminated with bacteria and fungal spores during the collection period, which can last for several hours.

This is where our hydrolats differ. We ONLY distil for the hydrolats and distil in very small batches often only collecting one litre of precious liquid capturing the organoleptic character of each botanical. Using these methods, we can offer you a far greater ranger of hydrolats.

Benefits of hydrolats

Hydrolats contain water soluble plant compounds including tannins and flavonoids and contain around 2% of the volatile essential oils. The 2% volatile compounds are bonded into the water molecules in a process called hydroxylation and its these compounds that can give a hydrolat its milky colour when first produced, and later ‘angel hair’ strings in the liquid. Hydrolats are:

- ✓ Excellent for emotional release, particularly with smaller or young animals including cats when essential oils are just too strong. They are still super effective, but sometimes less is more.
- ✓ Safe and easy to offer
- ✓ Can be safely ingested, inhaled, applied topically or via a warm compress or poultice
- ✓ Can be blended with other hydrolats and essential oils can be added.
- ✓ Unlike essential oils, they are not photoreactive and can be safely used on all skin types in the sun.

Flower & Crystal Essences

TheEssenceStore

We are now offering our customers Flower and Crystal Essences made by Sarah Faulkner of the The Essence Store. Bach flower qualified, Sarah has spent years creating the English Signature Range. These unique, powerful essences combine both ranges, as well as the healing energy of botanicals and crystals imprinted within water. Water holds the etheric energy imprint of the flowers, a vibrational essence. These heal on the emotional level, the root cause of physical issues. Sarah can also make bespoke blends to suit every requirement.

The Essence Store range includes

- Rescue & Fear
- Grief
- Animal Communication
- Puppies & Kittens
- Dog Healing
- Aggressive Dogs
- Cat Healing
- Multi-cat homes
- Horses
- Horse & Rider
- Unridden Equines
- Donkeys & Mules
- Rodents
- Birds
- Wildlife
- Fish & Reptiles
- Elderly Animals

Each 30ml dropper bottle is £15.50.
These remedies can be purchased through our online store and will be dispatched directly from The Essence Store.

Alternatively, you can order directly at www.theessencestore.co.uk

Calm & Balance Range
Self-Selection Kits

We developed the Calm & Balance kit range to offer both emotional and physical support for some of the most common issues our animals face on a daily basis.

Each kit contains:

- 6 botanicals
- 6 pouches for offering botanicals
- 2 essential oils or hydrolats
- Aromatic spray blend
- Herbal supplement
- Animal Aromatics Guide to Self-Selection hand-book
- Discount voucher for further purchases

Our targeted kits include:

Calm & Balance – Specifically for those needing to take a step back before reacting. A milder calmer than the Calm & Tranquil

Calm & Tranquil – Specifically for those needing calmness and tranquillity in their stressful lives.

Love & Loss – Specifically for those suffering loss, bereavement or a change of home

Nerves & Fear – Specifically for fear of loud unexpected noises including fireworks, storms, high winds and lightening

Pain & Anxiety – Specifically designed for those experiencing physical pain resulting from stress & anxiety

Self-Confidence – Specifically designed to boost self-confidence, for a full and happy life

Separation Anxiety – Specifically designed for those suffering separation anxiety whether from an animal or human friend

£ 60
per kit

Calm & Balance
Sprays & Essential Oil Blends

In addition to our self-selection kits, we are also offering a range of blended essential oil infused hydrolat sprays separate from the kits, and targeted essential oil blends.

Calm & Balance Sprays

We have blended our fantastically aromatic hydrolats, and infused them with essential oils for this range of 200ml sprays to offer for:

- Calm & Balance
- Calm & Tranquil
- Love & Loss
- Pain & Anxiety
- Nerves & Fear
- Self-confidence
- Separation anxiety

Calm & Balance Essential Oil Blends

For those needing a deeper level of calming, we have blended two powerful essential oil blends. Choose Calm & Balance for those needing a gentle calmer, or Calm & Tranquil for extra relaxation.
